Belz is a town between the Solokiya River, a tributary of the Western Buh, and its tributary Richytsa (Zhechitsa). It's possible, that the name referring to a treeless area between thick forests, or to a swamped, difficult to traverse area. Belz is among Poland's oldest towns and is mentioned in the Ruthenian Chronicles of 1030. It was established as a residential town in the 13th c. and received rights of a Polish royal town in 1509, in accordance with the Magdeburg law. Jews are mentioned in documents from 1413. In 1550 there were 32 Jewish homes. During the 17th century outstanding individuals such as the authors of the holy works Bayit Hadash, Meirat Einayim, Baer Heitev and Torat Haim served as its rabbis. From
